

Seligman APV Fellowship

Hot desire to study in the UK?

We are looking for PhD students or recent graduates who are involved in food engineering

If you are a PhD student or a recent graduate in food technologies or engineering, you are eligible to compete for the Seligman APV Fellowship. The Fellowship will fund your stay in the UK and allow you to study in one of UK's renowned centres of food technology/ engineering, teaching or industrial research for a continuous period of up to 6 months as part of a programme.

Funding of up to £9000 is provided to cover successful candidates' expenses including a round trip to the UK, accommodation and living expenses.

The Seligman APV Fellowship is a prestigious and competitive award, and is well-respected by industry professionals and academics. A Seligman Fellowship can be an important addition to your CV.

Please Note: Applicants should have concluded their studies and be in employment by the time they undertake their fellowship.

The extended deadline to receive completed applications is 17th September 2010.

Apply online: www.soci.org/seligman-application
For further information, please contact: awards@soci.org

www.soci.org

